SENECA—The most widely grown variety in Ohio; also popular in many other states. It is red chaffed, beardless, stiff strawed, high yielding and in normal seasons has good test weight.

THORNE — Similar to Seneca in color, standing ability, milling qualities and in yield.

PENNOLL — A Pennsylvania variety, stiff-strawed, tall, white chaffed and beardless. High in test weight, excellent yielder, winter hardy.

VIGO — An Indiana wheat, winter hardy, of good test weight, white chaffed, beardless, not quite so stiff-strawed as Seneca.

KNOX—Winter hardy, high yielding, medium short, white chaffed and beardless. About a week earlier in maturity than above varieties.

DUAL — A winter hardy, medium short, stiff-strawed, high yielding variety resistant to leaf rust and Hessian fly. May be sown ahead of fly free date.

VERMILLION — Similar to Knox in early maturity and length of straw but is superior in winter hardiness and more resistant to loose smut.

DAYTON BARLEY—A new variety equal to Kenbar in test weight, strength of straw and winter hardiness but has been higher yielding.

HUDSON BARLEY—A stiff strawed, medium early variety with resistance to barley diseases. Yields and test weights have equalled or exceeded other varieties.

KENBAR BARLEY — Is a high yielding early variety. Above average stem strength and winter hardiness.

WONG BARLEY — Stiff-strawed and compact heads with a few short beards. Is not as winter hardy as Dayton and Hudson. All barleys should be sown 10 days or two weeks ahead of wheat to get well started before winter.

BALBO RYE — A rapid growing variety producing a good grain yield and early fall and early spring pasture.

T. P. RYE—Introduced as Tetra Petkus, vigorous stiff-strawed, high yielding, starts more slowly than Balbo and comes along later in spring.

DUBOIS WINTER OATS—High yielding, medium early, more winter hardy than other varieties. Less winter hardy than wheat or barley. Sow early to get oats well started before winter.
